

Humanists not Split over Ethical Sex

Why do you have to find 'splits' everywhere? (Londoner's Diary, 31 January 1990.) The members of the British Humanist Association are not split on my draft Ethical Code of Positive Sexuality. The letters I am receiving from members are universally supportive. Many say such a Code has long been needed. Thank Humanism for George Melly, whose comment that one's sexuality is a very positive thing you quote.

My book Sexual Ethics (which is still looking for a publisher)<sup>1</sup> is all about converting our approach to the subject from negative to positive. That does not mean that anything goes - far from it.
